What Do Gardeners Do in Winter?

Winter is the time for planning changes to gardens and creating new ones. Our design team includes myself, Stephanie and Julie, and we are happy to meet with you now to explore ideas. Why wait? This quiet season offers clarity of mind, with time to sit and reflect. The "bones" of the garden, its inner structure, are laid open. Look outside your window. What would you like to see there?

Time to Prepare the Seedlings

This January I am delving into the seed catalogues with your gardens in mind, selecting the most colorful, vigorous and/or tastiest varieties (many are heirlooms) for our annual seedling order. Forms will be available in February, but since success requires advance planning, now is the time for research. Remember that we can custom grow specific plants for you! Think flowers for cutting gardens, fresh herbs and vegetables. If you happen across something you'd adore growing in your garden, please let me know.
